A child will be banned from the area surrounding Liverpool's Anfield stadium for matches until March 31 in a bid to quell violence and disorder at matches. The temporary ban will apply to games at the ground, as well as grounds within a 15-mile radius of Anfield, which is home to Liverpool Football Club. It will come into effect after a number of "serious disorder" incidents at the stadium. Police forces from Merseyside, Cheshire, Lancashire and Greater Manchester have helped to identify a number of people, believed to be mainly between the ages of 15 and 20, who are suspected of involvement in "hostile disorder" at matches. Activities of fans at grounds within a 15-mile radius of Anfield are being monitored by the Football Association (FA) and local authorities, following problems at a number of recent games. Support free-thinking journalism and attend Independent events This week's game between Liverpool and Watford on Wednesday will be the first match covered by the temporary ban. The plans will also see a concerted crackdown on drinking in the area surrounding Anfield. A large group of police officers, including members of the Merseyside force, will patrol the area around the ground to encourage people to be more respectful of each other, according to the Liverpool Echo. Supporters of the Premier League side are known for some of the rowdiest behaviour at matches, with scuffles, pitch invasions and fights between fans breaking out. This has caused the game to be moved from Anfield to Wembley for many years and there have been several incidents of violence at the ground in recent years, including the collapse of a safety fence during the game against West Bromwich Albion in 2015.Q: When a Mercurial push is rejected by a central repository, what do you do with the rejected files? I'm in a project with a central Mercurial repository that I am not able to modify. I'm just working on a branch, and I want to push my changes back to the master branch on the central repository. What is the best way to get my changes back on the central repo? A: 82157476af
